A photograph of a library interior. The scene is a long, brightly lit hallway with high, vaulted ceilings and classical architectural details like columns and arches. On the right side, there are several computer workstations with large monitors and wooden desks. Two men are visible: one in the foreground is looking at a computer screen, and another further down the hallway is also working at a computer. The floor is carpeted, and there are framed pictures on the walls. In the background, a doorway leads to a section with bookshelves.
